...TY-TWO DIE AS SCHOOL BURNS

GIRL PUPILS AND MATRON MEET DEATH IN NIGHT FIRE

TERRORIZED STUDENTS FIGHT OFF RESCUERS

Hope School for Retarded Girls Destroyed With Great Loss of Life.—Many Acts of Heroism Displayed in Attempts to Save Inmates.

Los Angeles.—Twenty-two bodies had been recovered from the ashes of the Hope School for Retarded Girls at Playa del Rey.

Of the total, twenty were girl pupils, averaging in ages from 13 to 17. The other bodies were those of Mrs. J. C. Thomas and of Woolford Wringer, adopted son of the school's proprietor.

As the firemen were able to reach the dormitories that proved a death trap to the girls, they found the bodies lying in orderly rows, their lives apparently snuffed out by the heavy smoke before the victims could arouse themselves and attempt to escape the flames.

A check of the bodies in the morgues accounted for most of those reported missing Saturday night. The appalling figure, corroborated by the Los Angeles county coroner's office, increased the death total considerably more than first estimates placed it and stamped the fire as one of the worst disasters in the history of the county.

Woolford Wringer, adopted son of Mrs. Mary E. Jacobs, the school's proprietor, believing his foster-mother within the burning building, entered the inferno in an attempt to rescue her. Coincident with his disappearance into the flames it was reported that the proprietor was visiting friends in Pasadena. The lad was never seen alive afterward.

The finding of the body of Mrs. J. C. Thomas, matron of the school, recalled a tragic story of when the fire was at its height, and marked her as perhaps the outstanding heroine of the disaster. Resisting attempts of firemen to get her from the building, Mrs. Thomas stayed at her post trying to rescue her charges. She started to grope her way through the smoke-filled rooms. A wall crashed in and she was burried beneath it.

Firemen and others who worked heroically throughout most of the night, told horrifying tales of the blaze. After groping their way to the dormitories through hallways dense with smoke, the rescuers said they found rows of children sleeping in utter unconsciousness of their danger. Windows were thrown open and the nearest children dropped to safety.

But the girls, partially stupefied by the smoke, became alarmed by the screams of the agonized victims and glare of the flames and a scene of confusion followed. They ran in frightened groups and fought the efforts of their rescuers to get them to the opened windows.

As the flames gained headway rapidly, the workers were forced to give up their mission and bow to the intense heat, and many terrorized children are believed to have been left huddled with fear in dark corners where they could not be reached.

The fire swept through the dormitories with surprising rapidity and had gained much headway when the Venice fire department arrived. The volunteer crew virtually had been forced to abandon its efforts. The firement offered a valiant resistance, but too much time had elapsed to allow them to do other than confine the fire to the building in which it started.

Throughout the night hundreds of spectators watched the crackling flames and stayed on the scene until early hours of the morning waiting until the embers had cooled sufficiently to allow the work of taking the bodies from the ruins.

Boy scouts and police aided in controlling the crowds. Streets for miles were lined with automobiles, many of which served in rushing unconscious girls to hospitals and others who escaped injury to private homes for the night.

FRANKS' SLAYERS SONS OF WEALTH

DETAIL GRUESOME PLOT OF KIDNAPING AND MURDER

SCIONS OF MILLIONAIRES PLAN DEED FOR RANSOM

Ten-Day Chicago Mystery is Solved With Horn-Rimmed Spectacles as Leading Clew.—Youths Admit Guilt After Grueling.

Chicago.—Richard Loeb and Nathan Leopold, millionaires' sons who admitted killing Robert Franks, 14-year-old school boy, "just for the fun of it," face trial for first-degree murder.

"They killed an innocent child for the fun of it;' they'll be brought to justice as rapidly as the wheels of the courts can be turned," was the word that went out from the office of State's Attorney Robert E. Crowe.

Loeb, soon after the confession, broke down and collapsed. He was taken to a hospital and revived; then forced to accompany Leopold and a party of officers over the scene of the murder, reenacting the crime in all its details.

While attaches of the state's attorney's office were preparing the case against the two youths, attorneys for their wealthy parents were hastily setting up a defense. Benjamin Bachrach, consul for Leopold's father, is temporarily heading the defense.

Why two boys, sons of millionaire families, profound students, clear thinkers and worldly wise, should carry out a plot of murder, "just for the fun of it," is the problem perplexing the psychiatrists and alienists. It may lead, one of them admitted, to the writing of a new chapter in the textbooks of criminology; the case is unparalleled.

Leopold, son of the president of the Morris Paper Box company, holder of a degree of bachelor of philosophy from the University of Chicago, admitted it was he who plotted the kidnaping and murder. Just before confessing, young Leopold was discussing philosophy and religion with his examiners. He professed to be an atheist.

Leob, son of Albert Leob, vice president of Sears, Robuck mail order firm, was Leopold's accomplice. Leob is known as the youngest graduate of the University of Michigan, receiving his A. B. degree at the age of 17.

Both confessed murderers have been students in the law department of the University of Chicago. They continued their daily classes until their arrest. The plans for the kidnaping and murder were laid in spare moments between classes and during evenings when they went together to out-of-the-way places, ostensibly to "study nature."

CALIFORNIA TAX REFUND RULING HELD NOT FINAL

Washington. — Attorney General Stone's ruling countermanding a previous ruling of former Attorney General Daugherty entailing a possible refund to estate and income taxpayers in California is not final. Senator Shortridge, following the publication of Stone's letter on the subject, took the matter up with him and learned that the Daugherty order had merely been "recalled for further consideration." The entire subject matter is left open, and Senator Shortridge informed the attorney general that he desires an opportunity for a full presentation of the claims of California taxpayers before a final decision is reached.

The recall of the Daugherty decision, it was stated, was due to the fact that officials of the treasury department had sought further advice from the attorney general in order to be certain of protection before proceeding to the repayment of $130,000,000 out of the federal treasury.

75,000 Shriners at Meet

Kanses City, Mo.—Fezzes. The blaring of bands. Joyous shouts of greeting. Laughter. A city dressed up in loud colors. Traffic jams. Everywhere—excitement. The Shriners are in town! The Islam band of San Francisco brought with them the care-free spirit of the coast and the latest in syncopation and willingly distributed both. Another coast temple, Al Malaikah of Los Angeles, did the honors at Troost park.

Austrian Chancellor Shot

Vienna.—Dr. Ignatz Seipel, chancellor of Austria, was shot in the lung at a railroad station here. Following the shooting, Seipel's assailant attempted to commit suicide. At the hospital belief was expressed that Seipel would recover. Several shots were fired at the chancellor, only two of which took effect. The would-be assassin is under arrest.

ERNEST BARRON ANSWERS FINAL CALL

One of the saddest deaths which has occurred in Campbell for some time was that of Ernest Barron, who passed to the Great Beyond on May 29, at the age of forty-one years.

Funeral services were held Saturday, the Rev. A. W. Noel Porter officiating, and the wealth of beautiful flowers and the large numbers gathered to do him honor testified to the high regard in which he was held by his many friends and acquaintances, both personal and business.

Mr. Barron came to Campbell from England about fourteen years ago and until the past two years had been a valued member of the J. C. Ainsley office force. In partnership with Herbert Gray, of San Jose,, he bought the Pyle Cannery in that city which had been operated for a year and a half under the name of the Barron, Gray Packing Company.

During all of his years here he has never been in robust health, but was obliged to exercise discretion in his amusements and pleasures, but was ever a cheerful, hapy companion--never complaining or speaking of his own troubles.

During the months of his last illness his nurses and attendants have spoken of his wonderful patience, courtesy and appreciation of all that was done for him.

Possessed of a fine voice, he was very generous in helping at community events and for the entertainment of his friends. He was the very popular director of the Men's Glee Club which several years ago was a valued adjunct of our musical world, giving benefit entertainments and numbers on various programs and helping put over the liberty loan drive during the war.

Sad indeed is the home bereft of husband and father and to the courageous mother is extended the heartfelt sympathy of the entire community as she takes up the double task of caring for the children, little Billy, Betty and Bruce.

DROUGHT KILLS FRUIT TREES IN SUNNY SOUTHLAND DISTRICTS

Geo. E. Hyde Writes of Interesting Trip

Our good friends, Geo. E. Hyde and wife, are making their annual business trip thru the eastern states and Mr. Hyde has written the Editor an interesting story which we are passing on to our readers.

Washington D. C., May 25, 24.

Dear Harry:

We left San Jose May 3rd on the Shore limited connecting at Los Angeles Sunday morning with the Sunset Limited.

On arriving at Yuma we experienced the Arizona State officers watching for any infractions of the quarantine regulations. Nothing transpired to cause even a ripple in the Hoof and Mouth quarantine. What most caused us much anguish were the many evidences of damage from drought going through to Oxnard and the valleys just before reaching Chatsworth tunnel—acre after acre of bearing apricot trees having a large proportion of them dead, same with young walnut trees, and as hardy as peach trees are in cases of drought, yet many bearing peach trees were dead. In several instances in very large orchards it would be difficult as we passed along to find any live trees. Same condition prevailed in orchards along the tracks as far as we could see between Los Angeles and Colton. We stopped twice before reaching New Orleans. The weather was unusually cold, and much rain along the Mississippi river and also in Arkansas and Texas. The weather all spring has been so cold and rainy as to kill much of the cotton that was coming up. At Memphis a cotton buyer told me a very large part of the cotton will be killed necessitating its being replanted. Arriving at the corn countries the fields are ready for planting but no corn had been planted because of the same cold and damp conditions.

As far north as the Great Lakes the same conditions prevail. Even snow has fallen within a week in Michigan.

Business is dull, everyone seems to be afraid to buy anything. All this has come on because of the various investigations in Congress and the uncertainty of what may happen. Business should be good and no doubt will be as soon as things settle down to normal.

Very few of the coal mines in Wes tVirginia or along the Ohio river are being worked. Many of the steel mills are not working or in some instances only working part time.

There is a well organized movement on foot to consolidate the coal mines so a part of them can then be closed and the number of miners be reduced so that the rest of the mines and also the remaining miners can be worked all the time thereby giving them a chance to work steadily and earn full pay. Also coal will not be so high because where miners as now only work about 3 days a week it means they must have higher wages so they can live and that makes the coal higher in price per ton to the consumer.

It seems like a wicked waste of water running rapidly in the rivers, banks full and overflowing with muddy looking water, all going towards the ocean, and we in California would be immensely benefitted if we could have some of this water.

On arriving in Washington people told us there had been only three clear days in this month. Today the sun rose clear, but before night the sky became overcast with every evidence of rain soon.

We are both well.

Yours truly,
GEO. E. HYDE.

The PRESS this week goes to practically every home in this section of the valley. For some time the Campbell Commercial Association members have been united in a co-operative campaign to give the buying public a comprehensive idea of the many lines of business carried on in our prosperous town. And our town has prospered. Many new homes have been built and several improvements have been made in the business district. Business has been steadily on the increase.

The Association's "Broadcaster" which was printed by the Press Printery from time to time is now issued as a part of the Press.

WHAT MAKES A COMMUNITY?

The word "community" has come into general use of late. It has an inner meaning that may be hidden from some.

Community comes from a word meaning common. It is a place where people realize that they have common interests which all share, and where people generally take hold to work for these common purposes.

The old time country town did not ordinarily do that. It was not as a rule a community. Every man went about his own business. It did not occur to them to pool their interests, join forces, and get things done. So they just drifted along and made little progress. A country town begins to go ahead on the date that it wakes up from being just a town, and becomes a community.

To Kill Tire Mileage

Any man who caught himself cutting his tire tread with a file would voluntarily apply for admission to the nearest retreat for the feeble-minded. Yet the same man will lock his brakes and slide ten feet and think nothing about it.

Too many motorists confuse their tires with skates. Instead of looking ahead for obstacles and checking the car slowly by closing the throttle with the clutch engaged, they wait until they are right in the middle of an emergency and then jam on the brakes. They never stop to consider these little slides with the brakes locked until they notice spots where the tire tread is worn through to the fabric.

Even where the tread is not scraped through to the fabric, tire men point out that there are flat places left in the tread. Then as the car proceeds, these flat places, they explain, pound away.

Resiliency in Wheel Produced by Springs

The Scientific American in illustrating and describing a resilient wheel, the invention of J. Schmidt of New York, says:

One of the primary objects of the invention is to provide a wheel of the resilient type in which the resiliency is produced by a plurality of springs. A further object is to provide a wheel in which a cushion tire may be employed with the result that resiliency equivalent to that obtained in a pneumatic tire is attained. The device may be readily disassembled for the purpose of repair or the like.

How to Stop a Car.

When making a stop, close the throttle and withdraw the clutch at a distance from the stop, allowing the momentum to carry the car forward until a very slight pressure on the brake brings it to a standstill. Constantly practiced, this little saving will subtract a nice margin from the running expenses.

Bow Protector Tends to Prevent Injury

The Scientific American in illustrating and describing a bow protector for automobile tops, the invention of T. H. Murphy, L. S. Isbell and E. W. Sawyer of North Anson, Me., says:

Among the objects of the invention is to provide a safety device in the form of a cushion protecting means for the bow of a top of an automobile whereby to avoid possible injury, should an occupant of the rear seat be thrown upwardly and strike his head upon the bow. The device comprises a casing which may be inflated, and is adapted to be fitted upon the lower side of the bridge portion of the bow.

Large Washer Helps in Transferring Oil

The tipping over of the funnel while filling the gasoline tank or pouring oil into engine bases through breather pipes results with loss of oil unless the funnel is held with one hand, in which instance the person pouring is under a handicap. A simple modification to the funnel consists in soldering a large washer over the spout. With the washer secured to the funnel it will rest upright on the gas tank opening or on the breather pipes, permitting the use of both hands for tipping the oil can.

Despite her alleged confessions and purported statement that she knew nothing of the robbery of the State Bank at Taft until shortly before it took place, officers say they have evidence which will prove Eleanor Walling, bobbed hair, alleged bandit, arranged all the details three weeks before the holdup with the understanding she was to receive one-half of the loot.

Edward B. Aldrich, 80, one of the pioneer stage drivers of central California, is dead. For years he drove a 6-horse stage and express out of Sacramento to the Mother Lode district mines. Realistic Flowers Made From Glass by Experts

Marvelous artificial blooms that resemble Nature's finest specimens in every respect except scent, are now being made by expert glassblowers.

Every part of a flower or plant is faithfully reproduced, from the long, delicate stems and colored petals to the almost invisible pollen.

The first thing which the maker of these wonderful blooms does is to blow the petals from glass as thin and fragile as tissue paper. The glass petals are then shaped and colored exactly like the natural ones.

Some of the rarer plants cannot be easily reproduced, and often several experiments have to be carried out with different colors before a really good imitation is obtained.

These glass flowers are used extensively in museums, both to show details of plant or flower formation and as backgrounds for displaying specimens of birds and insects.—London Answers.

A Woman's Postscript

Do all wives open their husbands' letters? Was Harry's mother only taking precautions that any woman should take, or was her daugher-in-law a special offender and as such especially sensitive on the subject? We leave that to our readers to settle. This is the story as the Argonaut reports it:

"Harry, dear!" exclaimed little Mrs. Simpson to her husband, "I have b-been d-dreadfully insulted!"

"Insulted! By whom?"

"B-by your mother," answered the young wife, bursting into tears.

"My mother, Flora? Nonsense! She's miles away!"

Flora dried her tears. "I'll tell you all about it," she said. "A letter came for you this morning addressed in your mother's writing, so I—I opened it."

"Of course," said Harry.

"It—it was written to you all through. Do you understand?"

"I understand. But where is the insult?"

Efficacy of Tar Water

Rev. George Berkeley, bishop of Cloyne, was an ethereal philosopher who set out to undermine the stolid materialism of his time, and two hundred years ago he maintained that matter cannot be conceived to exist, the only possible substance being mind. "The material world," he said, "is nothing but a complex of ideas which come and go with an order and coherence that constitute the law of nature."

The good bishop sometimes descended to earth to discuss the simple, mundane things. He had a curious obsession regarding the medicinal efficacy of tar water, which was much used in his time as a drink beneficial to all human ailments. "Tar water," the bishop held, "is of a nature so mild and benign and so proportioned to the human constitution as to warm without heating, to cheer but not in[illegible]—Detroit News.

Dry Drive in Gotham

New York.—The greatest dry drive ever attempted in New York is under way, aimed at closing and padlocking 6,000 establishments where liquor now is sold, before the Democratic convention meets here in June. United States government's prohibition forces, backed by strong legal staffs to push the court cases against those arrested, descended on New New York in a veritable landslide.

To the VOTERS OF THE 27th SENATORIAL DISTRICT:

I hereby announce my candidacy for the position of State Senator from the 27th District of the State of California.

This announcement and my candidacy are on my own initiative and not at the request of friends or any organization whatsoever. I am not an unwilling candidate yielding to pressure from others to enter upon a field of public service.

Having dedicated my life to public service I am desirous of functioning as efficiently as possible, and after nine years of full time service as a volunteer worker particularly along legislative lines I now ask your support for an official position that I may serve you more effectively.

2. Human welfare.

My credentials are my past record.

I cordially invite the support of all individuals and organizations who can endorse my platform.

I thank you.

A LITTLE PLAIN TALK ON SPEED

This morning I throttled down my car to ten miles an hour, mind you, TEN. A smooth paved road was beneath me. The thick plate glass all around me gave protection from the chill morning breeze. The soft rubber tires and thick cushions gave all the resilliency for comfort. And then I thought and thought till I "thunk" it all out. Here it is. I remember how we used to travel all day in a hard tired wagon with not even springs, and greeted the sunset with only thirty miles behind us. Still we were in a measure satisfied. The thirty miles was an accomplished fact. The faithful horses crunched their oats in satisfaction, and afterward leaned their heads in much needed repose. And we got along—got through the world—beautifully.

The thing is this; why all this speed? Why the forty, sixty, or eighty miles an hour? In the old days we would have been amply satisfied with the rubber tires and plate glass. Even the ten miles an hour straight through the day, with no horses to curry, hitch or feed, would have been a blessing in itself. And a paved road would have transported us to a land of dreams.

Let's slacken just a little from our orgy of speed. Let us live, and keep others alive.

In getting a "kick" out of things be sure you don't kick the other fellow.

Modern Banking and How it Has Changed From Pre-War Days

PERHAPS no branch of business has undergone such radical changes in the last decade and a half as banking; and if we extend the comparison back a quarter of a century the change is still more striking.

The banker of the last century held himself apart from the community in which he lived. He mixed with the few; confined himself exclusively to financial matters in dealing with the rest of the community, outside of a few intimates; never thought of rendering any service which was not strictly banking, and was particular about whom he permitted to open accounts with him, and especially, if he were a city banker, desired only large accounts, with big concerns. Those who had only a few dollars to bank must needs seek the safety of a venerable stocking or ancient tea pot.

But the war came and with the war an appeal to the masses to buy Liberty bonds and the wonderful discovery was made that hidden in the unconventional "safe deposit boxes" above referred to and similiar receptacles were millions, yes billions that no one knew existed. The banks awoke to a fact which the rest of the business world had long realized, that the small contributions of the many are even greater than the large contributions of the few. The result has been a complete change in the relations of bankers with the public.

Today the banker does not stand aloof from his neighbors and the community in which he lives; on the contrary he tries by every possible means to get in touch with them. He not only offers them inducements in a financial way to do business with him; but he seeks to attract them even with a line of advertising that his banking forbearers would not have thought of. Take, for instance, the Humboldt bank in San Francisco. Located on Market street where its doors are passed by thousands every hour, it utilizes its windows for attractive displays calculated to impress even the casual passerby with the financial opportunities the bank offers. Today we have a couple getting married and the suggestion that a wedding day is a good time to open a bank account appears in a part of the picture; tomorrow there is a stork bearing a baby in its beak: "Why not start an account for the baby so it will have a substantial sum to begin business with when it grows up?" is the suggestion. Or it is a scene recalling the fact that it is Lincoln's or Washington's birthday and that economy is one of the roads to success. Then we have the classic adaptation of the famous statue of the Laocoon with the recommendation that "Before you invest, investigate," or, as in the above picture, attention is called to the ceaseless activity of the silk worm and the wisdom of imitating its labors and quiet growth.

Formerly only large deposits were desired by the banker. Not so many years ago a prominent bank in San Francisco refused to open an account with a deposit of $2,500 because the amount would not pay them to handle. Evidently the window exhibits of the Humboldt bank are not intended to attract millionaires or heavy depositors and attention is called to the fact that "you can start a savings account with a dollar." Quite a change from the days when only thousands could open a bank account.

Nor is the effort to attract business limited to exhibits in windows. Daily the newspapers are scanned for the list of births and weddings and letters are sent to the newly wedded pair, or to the happy parents, suggesting that bank accounts are valuable for both newly-weds and parents.

Memorabilia of Famous Novelist Given Museum

All the memorabilia of George Sand, which were inherited by the granddaughter of the great novelist, Aurore Sand, have been bequeathed to the Carnavalet museum.

Letters, manuscripts of novels and numerous articles of extrinsic worth all are now on view in a part of the building called the "Musee George Sand," and the many admirers of George Sand, most of whom apparently haven't read her voluminous romances, are tripping out to the Carnavalet.

However, the article most characteristic of the author of "La Petite Fadette," a big black cigar, isn't in the collection, much to the disappointment of the visitors and also of the museum attendants, who are constantly being asked "whereabouts the cigars are."

Aurore Sand has come into the public eye not only because of her gift to the Carnavalet but also because she has just written a novel, "Encarnacion." The first book to appear under her own name, it has been received with considerable approval by the critics, who do not hesitate to say Aurore has inherited some of her grandmother's genius.—New York Tribune.

Meskwaki Tribe Bought Its Own Land in Iowa

The Meskwaki originally were a Wisconsin tribe, but now are living on a reservation in Tama, Iowa, being the only Indians in Iowa.

Some years ago the government granted them a tract of land in Kansas. They tried living on it, became dissatisfied and returned to Iowa, where they purchased their own land and formed a colony.

The Meskwaki are a very primitive tribe, but in the last ten years have advanced to the stage where the brave will go out and perform manual labor. They figure quite largely in the canning industry, and are to be seen going to work in automobiles that are the envy of the whites.

These Indians never were known to send a visitor away hungry. The average Meskwaki will walk a mile and visit two weeks at the home of a friend. Squaws of the tribe are very subservient and patient, and never complain when hubby drags home a raft of company for dinner. Instead they pour additional water in the soup and perhaps roast another chicken or two.

It is not an infrequent occurrence for visitors to appear from out the woods in every direction just as a Meskwaki meal is being served, and if there isn't enough to eat, Mrs. Indian must prepare enough.—Detroit News.

Most Violent Storms Occur in United States

The most violent storms known anywhere occur in the interior of the North American continent, especially in the middle western United States, and most frequently in late spring and summer. Their most conspicuous feature is a whirling black cloud hanging from a mass of dark storm clouds.

This cloud may be funnel shaped or balloon shaped, or like the trunk of a huge elephant. It is really a waterspout on land, though larger than the marine waterspout. It sweeps over a path averaging a quarter of a mile in width and about twenty-five miles in length. Wherever it touches the earth it accomplishes surpassing feats of devastation.

In comparison with the area covered by a cyclone one of these storms is of insignificant size. It is, in fact, a purely local affair. Hence, at any given place in the United States such a storm is an exceedingly rare event, though throughout the country several such storms occur every year. These storms are known to meteorologists as "tornadoes." In popular parlance they are almost universally, but incorrectly described as "cyclones."—Detroit News.

Origin of Earring

Gypsies, some Spaniards and Italians and renegade tribes of Indians still cling to the ancient custom of piercing the ear and suspending various grotesque figures from it. The idea of piercing the ear has gone into almost universal disuse, although at one time the medical profession even suggested that piercing was beneficial to the organ of hearing.

Long before the dawn of civilization earrings were almost as important in jewelry as today. At the height of her power Greece adopted the earring, both men and women wearing it. The Grecians were the pace-setters in styles in those days, it would seem, for the Romans did not incline so noticeably toward the movement until it had been well grounded in Athens.

Then Rome wasn't satisfied with the limitations of the earring, so her style dictators proceeded to make variations. The distinctiveness of the earrings in Rome was the addition of weight.

"It's the best pineapple!"

THE PINEAPPLE that we featured during "pineapple week" last winter went over big. A frequent comment from pleased customers was, "My, it's the best pineapple!"

By good luck we have obtained one more lot of the same brand to sell at the same bargain price—

8 cans R C Pineapple, $1.00

Description: Tender slices of medium thickness, as sweet as you ever tasted, sweeter than many folks have ever tasted. Large cans, the so-called quart size. Quality and quantity make it doubly a bargain.

Why to buy: The jobber is reducing stock, selling certain items below his cost for financial reasons. We are passing the bargain on to you. The object is to sell a large quantity of this fine fruit in a short time. Unless the consumer responds quickly, there is no use in offering such a bargain. Buy, then, for the present and for a little ahead. Remember, by the way, that apricots will soon be here—you know how delicious "cots" are when flavored with pineapple.

Fig Bars, fresh lot of that special, selling at 20c.

Sar-a-Lee Sandwich Spread—more popular every day—20c and 40c.

Blaine's Steel-Cut Coffee, JHN Brands, Isleton Butter, the staples that are so good they are always "special."

Seven years of thorough satisfaction

The Overland Freight Transfer Company of San Francisco operates over 125 pieces of automotive equipment, ranging in size from 10-ton Kleiber and G. M. C. tractors and 6-ton Doane trucks to Ford roadsters, all of which are probably subjected to as severe usage as any fleet of trucks in California.

This Company has ample facilities for testing out various lubricating oils and basing their choice on proven success in service. They write:

"After seven years of thorough satisfaction covering the lubrication of our equipment with your Zerolene oils and greases, we are more than pleased to again enter into a contract for our requirements."

In spite of the fact that many automotive engineers are of the decided opinion that the most suitable crude for the manufacture of an automobile lubricant is produced right here on the Pacific Coast, a certain proportion of the motoring public is still influenced by the superstition that there is something mysteriously "better" about eastern oils, just because they cost more.

ZEROLENE F for FORDS
—the Standard Oil Company's new improved oil for Ford cars "Feeds Those Oil-Starved Fords."

Why pay tribute to a superstition? The Zerolene-lubricated car develops better gasoline mileage, accumulates less carbon, costs its owner less for upkeep, and lasts longer.

Insist on Zerolene—a better oil—even if it does cost less.

This booklet reports independent service tests of Zerolene made by a number of large users. Ask any Standard Oil Company sales representative or Zerolene dealer for a copy.

Light Influences Color

Some curious observations made in Manchester, England, indicate that light and temperature may have a determining influence on the colors of flowers in different months. The investigator observed a tropaeolum, or nasturtium plant, which showed three types of flowers—yellow, yellow with red markings and claret-colored. Sometimes one type predominated and sometimes another. In the offspring of this plant he noticed that the parti-colored and red flowers occurred only during fine, hot weather, in the second week of August, whereas during the cold, wet periods of July, September and October all the flowers were yellow. By self-sterilizing the flowers of different colors he found that in the second generation the color of the parental flower had no determining effect, and he concludes that temperature and light are the governing influences.

Blood Money

"Blood money" was a term applied in the Middle ages to the money paid for bloodshed. It might be either the compensation paid by a manslayer to the nearest relatives of the victim, to secure himself and his kin from vengeance, or the money paid by a manslayer for bringing about the death of another, directly or through evidence.

It was once common among the Scandinavian and Teutonic peoples, who called this money payment wergild, and the custom still is practiced in Arabia.

The price varied with the nature of the crime and the rank of the victim. Certain crimes, such as the slaying of a sleeping person, could not be compensated by a money payment; such criminals were declared outlaws and could be slain with impunity.

The term is now applied to the reward or bribe for giving up a criminal to justice.—Detroit News.

W. H. Downs, his aged father, Taylor Downs, and W. F. Crawford, wealthy rancher of Los Olivos, will all stand trial at Santa Barbara for the murder of John J. Maguire, Los Olivos blacksmith, in spite of the apparent willingness of Crawford to take the entire blame providing the other two men are discharged. District Attorney Ward has stated definitely that he will press first degree murder charges against all three men. Maguire, the village blacksmith, disliked by many of the residents of Los Olivos, was blown to death in his little shack near the middle of town several months ago.

Stanley Moore Valentine, Piedmont boy scout, has been awarded the Eagle Scout badge, the highest in honor in the movement. The local court of honor conferred the honor at a mass meeting in the Piedmont high school auditorium. The rank of Star Scout, second highest rank in the scout movement, was bestowed upon Milton Silver.
